

ABSTRACT

A chip tray of the present invention includes on its underside a resilient sheet member that resiliently retains microelectronic components in the chip tray below by pressing gently but firmly down on the microelectronic components and the separators between 5 cavities that contain the components.